

Worksheet — The Leaf

Student Name: _____ Date: _____

Section: _____ Class/Roll No: _____

A. Fill in the Blanks

1. The stalk connecting the lamina to the stem is called the _____.
2. Venation where veins run parallel is called _____ venation.
3. In a compound leaf, incisions reach the _____.
4. The swollen leaf base in legumes is called a _____.

B. One Word Answer

1. Name the broad green expanded part of the leaf. Ans: _____
2. Name the type of phyllotaxy seen in Alstonia. Ans: _____
3. Name the type of compound leaf seen in Neem. Ans: _____
4. Name the type of compound leaf seen in Silk Cotton. Ans: _____

C. Match the Following

Column A	Column B
Alternate	Alstonia
Opposite	China rose
Whorled	Calotropis
Reticulate venation	Dicot leaves

D. True or False

1. Reticulate venation is typical of monocots. (True/False)
2. A simple leaf has incisions reaching the midrib. (True/False)
3. Buds are found in the axils of individual leaflets in compound leaves. (True/False)
4. The petiole connects the lamina to the stem node. (True/False)

E. Short Answer Questions

1. Differentiate between simple and compound leaves. [2 Marks]
2. What is phyllotaxy? Name its three types. [2 Marks]

F. Short Essay Questions

1. Describe the three parts of a typical leaf with their functions. [3 Marks]
2. Differentiate pinnately and palmately compound leaves with examples. [3 Marks]

G. Long Answer / Essay Questions

1. Explain the anatomy of a typical dicot leaf and describe the different types of venation and phyllotaxy with examples. [5 Marks]